Abstract

One of the key concerns in the growth of nations around the world is the empowerment of women. The development plans have intentionally incorporated institutional structures and initiatives that will support women's empowerment. While some of them directly support economic growth and other social goals, others are particularly successful in battling poverty. The creation of self-help organisations represents a growth for women. The study's goal is to examine the SHG managed by REST and AWARDS' organisational characteristics. The SHGs in the study areas are leading the way in this regard, taking the lead in social transformation welfare activities, creating infrastructure, and advancing the cause of women's emancipation. social cohesion and the development of the poor's socioeconomic situation. Therefore, there is a huge need for support in this area from the government, NGOs, and the international community.

Key words: Empowerment, welfare, infrastructure, NGOs
